

Here are some links to things that teachers might appreciate as a follow up to the keynote in relation to resources:

Debate about “process not product”. This conversation with some of the best International visual art ECE educators suggests that they are both important.

Elephant Series: Book Launch Day 1 \(kaltura.com\)

ecARTnz is an e-magazine of professional practice that show-cases examples of excellent visual art education for infants, toddlers and young children. Articles are written by early childhood teachers and students working in early childhood centres, academics and researchers. Articles are illustrated with colour photographs showing both teachers and children engaged in visual art learning experiences. Web-links to relevant internet sites are also included. The magazine provides information about relevant conferences for teachers. Books, websites and literature on visual art education for early childhood are reviewed.

You can download each issue for free. EcARTnz Magazine - ELP

The International Association of Art in Early Childhood Homepage - Art In Early Childhood

This organisation connects those around the world who have an interest in the visual arts for young children. The IAAEC aims to:

- provide a forum for an exchange of ideas about young children and the visual arts,
- encourage and support the visual arts in early childhood,
- connect researchers in the field,
- support a biennial international conference of art in early childhood.
- host the occasional virtual symposium, and
- disseminate research.

There's an Elephant in the Early Childhood Visual Art Classroom

The five interactive ebooks in this series are jam packed with ideas and resources for the arts in early childhood. They can be useful to lead professional development discussions.

<https://www.artinearlychildhood.org/theres-an-elephant-book-series>

Nga mihi

Lisa